Appraisal

If you are like me and have small ears, these headphones are perfect for you! As a person with small ears, I have always struggled with finding the right headphones. So, when I saw that the Yurbuds Inspire 400 headphones were specifically marketed for people with small ears, I decided to give them a try. These are fitness headphones; however, I focus primarily on how they work for people with smaller ears. In my evaluation, I focus on the fit and comfort, functionality, and sound quality.

Fit and Comfort

The shape of the rubber covers resembles the ear canal. This feature allows the headphones to comfortably sit in your ears. Yurbuds Inspire 400 headphones lock into your ears. This prevents the headphones from being easily tugged out of your ears. The cord is about 2 feet long, which allows you to put your phone or other music devices in your pocket comfortably. The earbuds are magnetic, which is nice for when you want to take the headphones off momentarily without them getting tangled. Several of the fit and comfort qualities help with the sound quality.

Functionality

If you have an Android device, like me, the button functions might not all work for you. The "next track", "previous track", and volume functions do not work for me. The "answer", "hang up", and "pause/play" functions should work perfectly for you. I have also read in other reviews that if you have an Apple device, all of the functions should work just fine.

Sound Quality

The shape of the rubber covers and the locking orientation help keep the sound in your ears. This creates great sound quality. I have found that you can listen to music or videos on very low volumes with these headphones because the sound quality is so good. The volume can be a very loud when using the headphones for phone calls; however, if you turn down the call volume really low, they work really well.

Conclusion

Overall, the Yurbuds Inspire 400 headphones work wonderfully. They will be great headphones for people with small ears. They will fit comfortably and stay in your ears very well. They have a long cord which adds to ease of use and comfort. The sound quality is great, especially on low volumes. I would highly recommend trying these headphones out.
